

D233 STIRLING, 13 JULY 2001 ~ SHAKIN' ALL OVER

I can't give an honest appraisal of D's performance here because I couldn't bear to sit through much of this hopelessly user-unfriendly DVD. As noted in a previous review, camera handling is so consistently poor that watching it becomes a trial of endurance from which, unless you're a masochist, no pleasure derives. A skip-through confirms that the problem remains unresolved throughout. Take a look at one of D233's DVDylan screenshots:

The blur you can see is imparted by a moving camera and the shot was probably a Hobson's choice pick because no more decent film could be found to take a still from.

D at Stirling Castle, 13 July 2001 - unfortunately, D233's pictures look nothing like these two at all ...

STARS None - desperate stuff. Avoid.
